

Essential Professional Development for Educators

Created by leading mental health and education experts at Partnerships in Education and Resilience (PEAR) and incubated at Harvard and McLean Hospital, we offer these four workshop tracks as a response to the urgent needs of educators, youth, and their communities.

Addressing the Youth Mental Health Crisis & Disruptive Behaviors Series

Youth mental health is at a crisis—the Surgeon General has issued an advisory on the urgency of the problem. This 3-workshop series offers solutions for educators.

Building Relationships, Belonging & Safe Structures Series

The disruption of the pandemic has led youth to feel disconnected from learning and their peers. This 3-workshop series helps educators create rituals and norms, reduce disruptions and build connections.

Supporting Educator Wellness & Reducing Burnout Series

Educators are leaving the field in record rates and those who are staying are reporting burnout and stress. This workshop helps educators build their personal wellness toolkit beyond the pandemic.

Leveraging Developmental Resilience in the Face of Adversity Series

Youth are facing their own challenges in addition to the stresses of the pandemic, racial injustice, political unrest, and climate crisis. This 4-workshop series introduces PEAR's new theory of building resilience while engaging with adversity.

All workshops can be taken as a one-time training or as part of a series and can fit into existing professional development time. Certificates and support for PDP applications are available.

PEAR is committed to create a workshop experience that will be right for your team. Please contact us to discuss workshop duration, group size, certificate and professional development points options. All workshops are virtual, and we can provide in-person training options in the Northeast and other select regions. Email contact@pearinc.org to learn more.

“This was the best PD we've had during school orientation! There was such a great balance of slides/ independent work/ group work. You really modeled for us how to create an engaging remote lesson and that was just as powerful as the many great resources you shared. I was genuinely sad when it was over!” – Workshop Participant
